

Business leaders build the workforce of tomorrow by investing in early childhood today.

Children who participate in early childhood programs are more self-sufficient in the future. They grow up to earn more money, pay more taxes and are less dependent on government programs. As well-prepared adults, they are part of a workforce that helps our communities thrive. Business leaders can ensure that more children are ready for Kindergarten and on a path to lifelong success.

How do you envision your role as a supporter of young children?

